W. R. Grant, in the interest of the company, has just returned home from a visit to Idaho, where he visited the mining camps of De Lamar, Silver City, mining camps of De Lamar, Silver City, Boise and Halley, and he states that the mining interests in these sections are beginning to look up, and that the mining fraternity of Idaho are feeling much encouraged over the outlook.

While absent Mr. Grant visited the Tip Top mine, near Halley, which is largely owned by J. Q. Packard of this city, while Captain Lusk, well known to Salt Lakers, bus charge of the property as manager and superintendent, erty as manager and superintendent, and he has reason to feel proud of the way the mine is coming to the front, as within its workings there are im-mense bodies of ore opened up ready for extraction.

Mr. Grant also visited the Flint mine, hear De Lamar, the property of Su-perintendent Holdridge, of the Burling-ton milroad. The Flint, according to Mr. Grant, is operating a 20-stamp mill smeessfully, and is treating mineral from a fine body of pay rock. At De Lamar the De Lamar company has discarded the amalgamation system of ore reduction, and is now treating its ores by the cyanide process successfully and on a large scale.

Mr. Johnsen, in connection with Messra Hon. R. C. Lund and Hon. A. G. Campbell, is pushing work in the extensive development of the Comstock group of claims, in which there is an immense showing of gold-bearing quarts, the ledges being exceptionally large and strong.

On this property the deepest working is a 90-foot shaft, in the bottom of which the ledge is larger and the values greater than disclosed nearer the surface, while on the group there is a 100-foot tunnel, which was run in on the vein, from the face of which a crosseut of 100 feet has been run, all the way in mineral that carries gold values, from a trace up to milling and slipping, the wail being reached in this direction; while a crosscut in the opposite dheetion has been driven in a solid body of quartz for a distance of 25 feet, without striking the other wall, which goes to give some idea of the mineral stry of the ledges in Eagle Valley district.

Paul Rodenhouse, well known in Utah mining circles, has returned from a two months' prospecting frip into the southwestern portion of the state and over the line in Nevada, and he informs The Heralida that in Steptoe Valley district, between De Lamar and Ely, he has located some gold properties for himself and J. In fact, the mineralization is so di-versified that although Mr. Johnson has been hard at work in the exploration and development of the Comstock for the part two years, he states that he is just becoming acquainted with the property, and be says that not long ago, on the south end of the Golden Slipper No. 2, and the north end of the Gold Note No. 2 claims, embraced in the Comstock group, he found a perfect windrow of quartz float, some of the pinces weighing at least 1,000 pounds, and he was surprised to find that nost of this would pan colors the values of this would pan colors, the values ranging from $1 to $300 in gold to the ton, and he is satisfied that he could gather up several wagonloads of this float without any difficulty, but the most pleasing feature of the discovery waits that he has since found the ledge, which varies from two to three feet in width, and is in place, the float and the quartz from the vein often carryling free gold that is visible to the naked

The exercises at the park closed with vocal selections, toasts and responses, several numbers by the band and benediction by President Charles Sperry.

There were many people present from neighboring towns, but owing to the oversightedness of the committee of arrangements no invitations were sent out in the usual manner, nor the press of Tintic or other nearby towns, where no celebration was contemplated, was enlisted to give the occasion publicity in advance.

No accident occurred to mar the cel-ebration from first to last, the only mishap being a collision that wrecked the Z. C. M. I. splendid beehlve float, which could not be repaired in time to participate in the parade.

The evening exercises were of a varied character, consisting of races, games, etc., and closing with a dance

They were kindly loaned by Spencer Clawson of the jubiles committee.

There were 2.000 people in attendance during the ceremonies at the park, the declaration of independence being read by Colonel George B. Squires and the oration by George M. Cannon. During the afternoon President Wilford Weodruff made a beautiful address. The platform on which President Woodruff and others made their addresses was erected between apple trees in the park, and a strange coincidence was that the seed from which the four trees grew were presented to Mr. Smoot by Wilford Woodruff years ago. Another thing worthy of mention is a conglomeration piece which was rendered by the bands, and all taking part, the author of the same being Morris B. sudden death of Frank Wingate of Monroe.

Mr. Wingate arose early this morning and went about the work watering his lot in Monroe. Breakfast was made ready, and, as he did not respend to the call, his parents at once became uneasy as to his whereabouts. A search was made of the tot and the unfortunate man was sound with his face in one of the irrigation ditches, dead. There was merely enough water in the ditch to cover his face, but as his mouth and nose were in the water, the two inches were the cause of his death. It is thought that when he started watering he became dizzy and unconscious and fell into this ditch and, as help could not be obtained, drowned in a stone's throw of the house.

Frank Wingate is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ceneas Wingate, who may be a face, was unmarried, and was one of the best known and respected young men in his town. He was not subject to fits, and to the fact that he was exhausted after a dance the night before is attributed the most of the cause of his and misfortune.

Mt. Pleasant, July 4.—Mt. Pleasant's In-dependence day celebration today has been without a parallel in occasions of the been without a parallel in occasions of the kind during late years. There was no parade, no attempt whatever at noisy demonstration, yet notwithstanding, citizens are wrought up to a high degree of enthusiasm. This was brought about to great extent by a bulletin read during the course of the remittion of the celebration exercises, which was on the glorious news of Sampson's victory. It was greeted with iremendous enthusiasm. The principal feature of the day's observance was a magnificent oration by Hon. Moses Thatcher. He favored war in the intercipal feature of the day's observance was a magnificent oration by Hon. Moses Thatcher, He favored war in the interests of humanity, but not for conquest, denounced the intimated intervention of foreign nations in the disposition of captured Spanish possessions. We would dispose of the same as suits our interests when the proper time arrives, and would accept of no interference. The appointments of "sons of somebody" to important positions was considered a crime, and was in the interests of financial schemers and politicians. The money power was altogether too much in evidence in the war, using the life's blood, the bonor and patriotism of the youth of the land. There was too much speculation. The speech received much applause.
